CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Beverly Leeder, Chaplain

At The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in a Memorial Day ceremony in 1982, President Reagan said: "The sight before us is that of a strong and good nation that stands in silence and remembers those who were loved and who, in return, loved their countrymen enough to die for them." As Memorial Day comes around again this year, let us pray for those soldiers who have been called to defend us today and ask God for their great success and safety. We also remember to give thanks for those who have so courageously sacrificed their lives for us to live free. Lord, we stand in awe of such dedication. Amen.

JUDY PFLUEGER

JULY and AUGUST—NO MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS.

SEPTEMBER —To be announced.

Advocacy returned to the Sacramento Hyatt Regency on April 18 and 19, 2011. Both Monday and Tuesday sessions started with a bang, as the new California Republican Party (CRP) Chairman Tom Del Beccaro from Contra Costa County told us that he is always sure to have the Republican Women participate in Central Committee activities. For great information go to www.CASpeaksOut.com and www.cagovcares.org and www.CostofCaGovernment.com. The 2011 Tour will be in Redding on June 30. Check www.CaSpeaksOut.com for time and location.

Tom Del Beccaro gave his time to the workshop for the Ambassador's Reception on Monday evening and he welcomed the club students from schools state-wide on Tuesday. The student's activities also included a tour of the Senate and Assembly.

On Monday, six CFRW legislative analysts each reported on SB and AB in-progress bills. See the Advocacy newsletter: Weekly Update and back issues. Before the lunch break, NFRW President, Sue Lynch, spoke on the topic "State of NFRW". Her message had multiple topics ranging from encouraging us to run for office to strongly urging us to be pro-Israel. Our outgoing National President is very gracious and humorous. She has been very active in all the states' clubs. I have enjoyed following her busy schedule in the Capital Connection on my email.

At 3 pm the conference members met across the street at the State Capitol steps for the Red Jacket Photo. The 2011 official photo included CRP Chairman Tom Del Beccaro and Senator Doug LaMalfa. Shortly after visiting with the Republican ladies, Senator LaMalfa invited (my new buddy) 2011 Chico Club President Sally Coupe` and me to visit the Senator's office. When we arrived there were six Chico State students waiting to meet him. At the completion of the private meetings, Senator LaMalfa invited both groups to the Senate floor and allowed us to stand at the front podium. The students were very refreshing and it was an experience to remember.

Back in the Capitol halls, Sally and I met a Southern Division new friend and we decided to visit the recently-moved Advocacy Office just two blocks away. Legislative Advocate Allison Olson is very informative about the bills coming our way, working with the analysts, then relaying to CFRW via the Weekly Update. On our walk back to the conference center, we visited the nearby Cathedral to pray for help and say thank you. In the entry, we met Tea Party celebrity Diana Nagy. She has traveled on the Tea Party Express bus and has appeared on Fox News. I had a treat given to me that morning of a ticket to the Ambassadors` Reception on Monday evening; therefore, I did attend the special occasion.

Tuesday: The club sponsored students attended the opening session, then broke out for the speakers. Returning for lunch with all of us, Sally and I visited with two Oroville High School girls and their advisers. Our afternoon speaker topics ranged from a very candid talk on "where we go from here" to issues concerning "caseload", to new net tax returns, and MediCal. The next two consecutive speakers conflicted on the progression of redistricting. Go to www.wedrawthelines.ca.gov and www.redistricting@cagop.org for more information. New district lines take effect in 2012. The following speaker went off her notes and commented on what the previous speaker was saying but told us that union groups are paid to be at the redistricting commission meetings (ACLU, Latino, Q2 were also listed). Tea Party members are very helpful but out numbered. Go to www.fairthelines.org for more information. This speaker also said the Latino groups sent out forms on how to apply and get on the redistricting commission. Several CFRW members stood to confirm that they received those forms. The Advocacy Conference ended by that last speaker saying "gerrymandering has got to be stopped!"

LEGISLATION UPDATE

Cammie Wollner, Legislation Chair

In the new session of Congress, State Senator Mark Leno (D-3) and Assemblyman Gil Cedillo (D-45) seem determined to push through legislation that failed last time around. Senator Leno's bill, SB 810, would require single-payer healthcare for all Californians. Thus we would have a "California Healthcare System" which would be regulated by a "California Healthcare Agency", which would oversee all healthcare in California.

Assemblyman Cedillo's bill, AB 130 is also known as the "California Dream Act" and exempts illegal immigrants from paying non-resident tuition at California Community Colleges and California State Universities if they have attended a California secondary school for three years. On Wednesday, April 13th this bill was approved by the Appropriations committee. It moves on to the assembly floor. Both bills will likely be signed into law by Governor Brown if they pass.

Senate Bill 24 (also Leno, D-3), which calls for a revision of history in order to prevent anyone, anywhere from being offended by any moments in history that could be seen as "negative" (to a long list of groups) passed in committee and is being ordered to a third reading.

On the federal level, spending is pushing the country towards reaching the "debt ceiling." The debt ceiling is the cap set by Congress on the amount of debt the federal government can legally borrow. It currently stands at 14.294 trillion (the debt on April 13th was 14.212 trillion). We are expected to hit the debt ceiling sometime in mid-May. House Speaker Boehner has told reporters that President Obama has agreed to consider a compromise that would be conditional on future government spending cuts.

AMERICAN HISTORY PARADE NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER

The First Thursday In May is the National Day of Prayer, a day that encourages Americans to pray for the United States, its people, and its leaders. The tradition of a National Day of Prayer dates to 1775, when the Second Continental Congress set aside a day for Americans to pay to "be ever under the care and protection of a kind Providence" as they began the struggle for independence. In the following decades, Congress and the president set aside various days for prayer. In 1863, Lincoln proclaimed "a day of national humiliation, fasting, and prayer" to help the country get through "the awful calamity of civil war" and for "the restoration of our now divided and suffering Country to its former happy condition of unity and peace."

In 1988, President Reagan designated the first Thursday in May as the National Day of Prayer, urging Americans to ask God for "His blessings, His peace, and the resting of His kind and holy hands on ourselves, our Nation, our friends in the defense of freedom, and all mankind, now and always"

He then held a public forum in Weaverville to share his insight on issues and answer questions from the public. A BIG THANK YOU to Shirley Dills, Trinity County Republican Women Federated 2nd Vice President for organizing the food and thanks to all the wonderful Trinity County Republican ladies who provided the lunch and desserts. Questions were asked about the state budget, his opposition to tax increases, funding for the county fairs, the cost of energy and alternative energy sources, marijuana growths, transfer of state prison inmates to county jails, environmental issues, county funding for education and protective services, and the state budget deficit. 'Negative' Outlook for U.S. Debt Sends Jolt Through Capitol Hill Debate on Debt Ceiling

Published April 19, 2011 FoxNews.com

The United States latest fiscal standoff -- an intensifying impasse over whether to raise the federal debt ceiling -- got a sudden jolt Monday when a top credit rating service expressed pessimism at D.C.'s political will to solve the debt crisis. It remained unclear whether Standard & Poor's decision to change its outlook on U.S. fiscal health over the next two years from "stable" to "negative" would prompt the White House and Congress to agree on a debt fix. But it certainly prompted both sides to affirm they are serious about the issue. "Serious reforms are needed to ensure America's fiscal health," House Majority Leader Eric Cantor said in a written statement, calling S&P's announcement "a wake-up call to those in Washington asking Congress to blindly increase the debt limit."

Republicans have called for attaching spending reductions to any increase in the debt limit, which nearly has been reached at over $14 trillion, but the White House has warned that failing to increase the limit in the coming months could be ruinous for federal finances and the economy as a whole, because the nation's creditors may lose confidence in the United States' ability to pay its debts.

S&P's announcement sent stocks tumbling Monday, but White House Press Secretary Jay Carney downplayed it, saying the political process will outperform the agency's expectations.

The Obama administration also acknowledged that there is increasing agreement on the scope of the problem. "Both political parties now agree that it is time to begin bringing down deficits as a share of GDP," Mary Miller, assistant secretary for financial markets at the Treasury Department, said in a written statement. "We believe S&P's negative outlook underestimates the ability of America's leaders to come together to address the difficult fiscal challenges facing the nation."

Not everyone is convinced that raising the debt ceiling is necessary, even with strings attached. "I wouldn't raise the debt ceiling. I never vote for the spending, so I'd hardly want to accommodate the big spenders," Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, told Fox News. "We should be, you know, live within our means. And you'd be forced to do it that way. "And of course ... you'll hear the fear mongers. They've already started, 'The end of the world is coming.'"

Republican Sen. Jim DeMint even threatened Monday to block a vote in Congress on raising the debt ceiling unless he wins a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution. The filibuster threat comes a day after Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner suggested Republican leaders had offered private assurances to the White House that they ultimately would vote to raise the $14.3 trillion ceiling, regardless of whether a deal is reached on long-term spending cuts. "The issue here is the debt ceiling has to be raised," Carney said Monday, and it cannot be held hostage to a process that is very complicated and difficult," he said. "We hope we will reach an agreement on deficit reduction -- a bipartisan agreement on deficit reduction within the time frame. We believe that's possible."

Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., told Fox News on Sunday that Republicans need commitments to significant cuts before a higher debt ceiling can be passed, and he took the S&P's announcement Monday as a "warning" of "the dangers of waiting for the perfect political moment to tackle our debt crisis. "It's time for both sides to drop their partisan talking points and decide what we can do together while we still control our own destiny," Coburn said Monday. "If we refuse to negotiate within our own government, we will soon find ourselves negotiating with foreign governments and the international financial community on terms far less favorable than we enjoy today."

CONGRESSMAN Wally Herger

REPORT FROM WASHINGTON
by Congressman Wally Herger
 April 15, 2011

Herger Supports Fiscally Responsible Budget

Washington, D.C. – Congressman Wally Herger (R-CA) issued the following statement in support of the Pathway to Prosperity, the Republican budget plan for Fiscal Year 2012, which begins October 1, 2011:

“America is facing a debt crisis that, if unchecked, threatens to consume our economy, destroy jobs, and leave our children and grandchildren with a financial burden from which they may not be able to recover. The budget resolution passed by the House today represents a strong step toward putting our nation back on the path to fiscal responsibility. The ‘Pathway to Prosperity’ cuts $6.2 trillion in spending over the next ten years – a sharp reversal of the out-of-control spending we’ve seen in recent years. It provides tax reforms that would allow American businesses to put that money back into job creation, increasing competitiveness both at home and abroad. It ensures that Medicare will be saved for future generations by providing fiscally sustainable reforms. In short, this budget forces Washington to do exactly what families across our nation have been forced to do – live within its means.

“In order to ensure that we lift the burden of debt from future generations it is essential that we make the hard choices before us today. Thus far, the Administration has failed to lead on the reforms necessary to truly solve the serious problems before us. History will judge us by what we do today and the choice is simple. Either we stand strongly in support of America’s future prosperity or we choose to continue the status quo of out-of-control spending that will lead our nation into economic ruin. I’m pleased to support a plan that would return our nation to fiscal responsibility and reverse the tax and spend culture of Washington.”

CFRW Northern Division Update

by Patsy Nelson, North Region Director

I attended the Redding RWF lunch on April 20th to hear our Republican Congressman Wally Herger talk about our nation’s debt crisis. Congressman Herger has prepared a three part series on the debt crisis that can be seen and heard by going to his website at www.house.gov/herger and click on the his Youtube link and watch the three part series. He discusses how the Republican budget that the House recently passed would stop the debt crisis in its tracks and spur job creation. The budget, called the Path to Prosperity, would cut spending by $6 trillion over ten years, repeal and defund the President’s health care overhaul, save the Medicare program for future generations, and help create an estimated 800,000 jobs next year alone. In doing so, it would free the American people from Washington’s massive debt burden and protect the prosperity of future generations. Congressman Herger said, “ I hope you find them (the presentations) helpful in explaining the debt crisis, its negative impact on job creation, and the new House majority’s proposed solutions to bringing it to an end. Feel free to share the presentations with your family members, friends, neighbors, and colleagues.”

"Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. We didn't pass it to our children in the blood-stream. It must be fought for, protected, and handed on for them to do the same, or one day we will spend our sunset years telling our children and our children's children what it was once like in the United States where men were free."
